Workplace engagement

October 2023

What is workplace engagement?

It's about building a positive culture to be proud of.

Foster positive organisational values, beliefs, behaviours, goals, attitudes and work practices. Communicate your expectations and encourage collaborative relationships. Recognise employees who show positive behaviours in line with your culture. Provide wellbeing activities to boost employee engagement and create meaningful connections. Promote healthy practices so employees can pursue better physical and mental health at work and in their own time. Understand the dynamics of your team by talking about recent events or challenges. Manage change well by listening, refining and empowering new ways of thinking.

Become a healthier workplace

This information sheet is designed to explain how to build your workplace engagement in a practical way, offering a variety of strategies and actions you can take to achieve a healthier workplace. The breadth of options is extensive. Not all suggested activities will be relevant to your workplace, but it's important to cover workplace engagement deficiencies identified in your gap assessment report.

Suggested actions and strategies listed in the following pages are labelled with icons to show what aspects of healthier work they address.

Take an integrated approach

Protect

Prevent and minimise physical and psychological harm

Offer formal and informal options for the safe, confidential reporting of inappropriate behaviour.

If an employee feels a process was unfair, such as a recruitment or promotion, give them a way to appeal the result of a process.

Give all employees equal and fair access to rewards, recognition, development and advancement opportunities. Make sure policies and processes are followed at all levels and outcomes are transparent.

Create systems for resolving conflict in the workplace and tell employees about them.

When investigating issues of misconduct, give all parties equal opportunity to respond to allegations.

Provide equal access to relevant training programs.

Communication and consultation

Offer clear and ongoing collaborative communication with workers at all levels.

| Tell your employees about how and why decisions are made. If possible, seek their input to decision-making while also providing feedback about what ideas could and couldn't be taken on board. | | | | | | | |
| Give employees opportunities to be involved in planning change to encourage uptake and ownership. | | | | | | | |
| Encourage feedback and participation in consultation processes. | • | | | | | | |
| Communicate through an agreed system (such as email or meetings) so employees are kept up to date with accurate information (to avoid rumours). | | | | (F) | | | |
| Use a variety of strategies when communicating or consulting about change, such focus groups, email/survey or a meeting, as people have different preferences. | | | | | | | |
| Provide a reason for a change in policy or procedure, including background and aims, so employees understand the decision-making process. | | | | | | | |
| Communicate business plans to all employees and explain how the plans connect to individual work. | | | | | | | |
| Talk to employees before making changes to their role or responsibilities. | | | | | | | |
| Talk to employees about shift rosters before rosters are created. | | | | F | | | |
| Talk with employees when developing performance monitoring systems. | | | | | | | |
| Offer a way for employees to have input into broader organisational issues (such as a suggestion scheme/box). | | | | F | | | |

Hold regular team meetings to discuss any work pressures or challenges and encourage employees to come up with practical solutions.

Talk to employees when developing policies or systems for performance monitoring.

Encourage 'no eating at desk' and other initiatives to get people away from their desks for a break.

If employees are being impacted by a procedure, listen to all concerns and allow employees to request information or clarification if needed.

Make sure workplace communications are easy to digest and accessible to all employees.

Give employees the time to talk through problems and encourage an 'open door' policy.

Set up an online portal so employees can easily access policies and other workplace information.

Encourage open communication, including sharing concerns about work-related stressors early.

Use open communication during times of change. Be upfront about any significant adjustments that will follow change (for example, a restructure or the need to retrain workers).

Ask senior leaders to promote the employee assistance program and share practical examples of how services can be used.

Recognition

Provide recognition to those employees who demonstrate positive behaviours.

fair and equitable, and make rewards achievable with realistic effort.

| When a job has been done well, congratulate individual employees or the team involved. Be specific about what was achieved and provide a formal or informal reward, such as a 'thank you' or 'great work' affirmation, or a gift certificate or bonus. | | | | | | | |
| Implement a rewards program for employee or team contributions to the organisation's goals. | | | | | | | |
| Recognise or celebrate exceptional efforts of those supporting a healthier work environment, such as a free healthy barbecue or acknowledgement email to all staff. | | | | | | | |
| Make sure your Workplace Recognition Program is communicated to all employees and that everyone has an opportunity to benefit from it. | | | | | | | |
| When rewarding teams for accomplishments, recognise each member of the team for their contribution to team goals. | | | | | | | |
| Provide rewards that reinforce teamwork (for example, a team dinner or a team trip) and make sure all team members who contributed to the project or task have equal access to the reward. | | | | | | | |
| Recognise and reward employees for their ingenuity or effort, not just for their contribution or productivity. | | | | | | | |
| Clarify the objectives and intent of your incentive-based scheme with all employees. Keep decision criteria for rewards simple, | | | | | | | |

Relationships

Encourage a culture of collaboration, respect and support.
